Nothing is really so unbearable as laziness. In the case of the idle man the "mind grows itself," as the French say. Pascal said that when a soldier, or a laborer, complains of the work which he has to do, let him be put to doing nothing. The lazy man, it has been said is a self-executioner, he becomes the pitiable victim of his own ennu.

The Roman Arena.

Under the Roman empire knights, senators and even women met in combat in the arena.

How to Clean Feather.

The safest method of cleaning a white ostrich plume is to move it back and forth in gasoline. Put about a quart of gasoline in a pan and move the feather about in it gently, using great care not to break the stem nor tear off the flues. If the feather is extensively soiled more than one portion of gasoline may be required. Hang the feather in the sun and air to dry. When dry take each flue between the fingers and curl it with a dull bladed knife. In using gasoline be careful not to be near the gaslight.

How to Wash Windows.

There is a wrong way to wash windows and a right way too. This is the right way: Choose a time when the sun is not shining on the glass. Take a brush and dust the window inside and out, washing all the woodwork inside before touching the glass, which should be washed slowly in warm water and a dash of ammonia. Do not use soap. Use a small cloth with a pointed stick to get the dust out of the corners. Wipe dry with a soft piece of cotton cloth. Polish with old newspapers.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. DORA L. SPEAR.

IN MEMORIAM.

WHEREAS, Our Divine Master, in His all-wise providence, has again visited our Mystic Circle, and by the hand of death has removed from our midst, our esteemed and beloved Sister, Grace E. Mearns.

Resolved, That it be a just tribute to the memory of our departed sister to say that in greeting her removal from our order, we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our love and respect.

Had He asked us, well we know
We should say, O, spare the blow,

HARRISON.

Harrison Town Clock.

Harrison is enjoying its new Town Clock, for which we are indebted principally to Prof. F. E. Bristol, of New York, who last summer, brought a class of thirty students to our town for vocal training, both he and his pupils became deeply interested in the welfare of the community and surroundings and cast about for an opportunity to express this interest in a material way.

They were not long in deciding that a Town Clock in the tower of Odd Fellows Block (a real one) to take the place of the dummy that has been indicating 10.33 ever since the tower was built, would be useful as well as an ornamental addition to our village, and to prove that their decision was wise, one has only to glance at the beautiful ground glass clock dials or listen to the deep mellow toned striking bell.

To secure the necessary funds, Prof. Bristol gave two mid-summer concerts that netted a goodly sum and the balance was secured by subscriptions from town's people and summer visitors, among the latter Harry Melosh of Jersey City, N. J., was the last and largest contributor to the clock fund, he voluntarily made up the rather formidable deficiency.

No serious damage was done, however, as Fred Greene and Harrington Flint were "Johnnies on the spot," one grabbing the lamp and going down stairs with it, the other taking off his overcoat and smothering the flames. But this slight fire makes us think that there should be one or more fire escapes built on this building before any more lamps fall.

FRYBURG CENTER

James Emerson.

James Emerson died of old age, Tuesday, Jan. 30th, at the age of 85 years and months, at his home at Fryburg Center. He was born at Chatham, N. H., Sept. 4, 1826, the son of Lydia Whitford and Daniel Emerson. As a boy he lived in Chatham, afterwards in Stow and for the past 47 years in Center Fryburg. He was a farmer.

He married Olive Abbott in 1850 at Stow. Four children were born to them of whom two are living, Mrs. Charlotte Binford, wife of Joseph Binford of Chatham and James Victor, who has always lived at the home place with his parents.

He served two years in the Civil War, I think after the three years he had a furlough for incapacity then enlisted for another year, making four years in all. He had two broken legs and was wounded in the side. He was in the battles of Winchester, Shenandoah Valley and Cedar Creek.

Mr. Emerson was a member of the Congregational church at Fryburg village. His funeral was from his late home, Thursday, Feb. 8, Rev. B. N. Stone being the attending clergyman. # ESSEX HIGH GRADE FERTILIZERS

INCREASE THE CROPS—NOT THE ACREAGE.

Soil fertility is the basis of large crops, and Essex Fertilizers are the bases of soil fertility. No soil can impart to a crop an element or substance that it does not itself contain. Essex Fertilizers are made up of the substances required by the growing plants in the most concentrated and available forms. They are composed of the most valuable organic matter—Fish, Bone, Blood, and Meat, with High Grade Potash added. Their action is immediate and lasting, thus supplying plant food throughout the entire growing season.

"I have used and sold Essex goods for two years, always with good results. This season with a dry Spring I have had the best crop of corn raised for years. On one piece of an acre and a half had 100 bushels of corn with stable manure plowed in and 400 pounds of Fish and Potash in the hill."

CHARLES F. PARKER, Brimfield, Mass.
"I have used your fertilizers and like them so well that I have ordered again for another season. I am satisfied with them, and have recommended them to others, because I have the best reasons for doing so."

W. R. SEAMANS, Anson, Maine.
If you have any farm troubles in the way of selecting the proper brand of fertilizer, write to us for suggestions. Our book will also help you.

Home Life in Pasadena.

Pasadena being essentially a city of homes, or to speak more exactly a garden of homes, it follows naturally that the ideal manner in which to see Pasadena is to become a unit of some individual home, a possibility within the reach of all visitors who will. One may spend months at some big hotel, go sightseeing ever so religiously, yet remain always and inevitably a "tourist," so alien, a stranger within the gates, that he belongs to the Raymond or the Granger or the Maryland. But select a quiet family hotel, or, better yet, a small boarding-house that is a home, not simply a collection of boarders, and let the magic circle be opened; you are a Pasadena, enjoying the land from within, not viewing it from the outside. For this reason it is often the visitor of moderate income who gains the most real knowledge of country and people, rather than the personally connected traveler, living at the great hostels, always more or less a detached colony.

Many women going for six months, or even less, prefer the housekeeping apartment (one or two rooms with kitchenette), or even one room, taking meals at a cafeteria; and as these may be found in scores of charming private families on beautiful residence avenues, the home quality is there in all its flavor. But for a wider insight the family boarding-house unquestionably affords more opportunities.

It was the writer's privilege to find such a home on Arcadia street—note the appropriateness of that name—a cheerful residence street connecting South Euclid and South Marengo avenues, not far from Colorado street, and within a few minutes' walk of church and shops. If any lone Yankee girl ventures to California to trust her fortunes may fall as happily. One is not merely a "boarder" in this Arcadian household; one is not long even a guest, but a genuine member of the family, with home privileges, and with home responsibilities of contributing to the common social life. After a week you discover that your room is but the retreat, for work and rest and sleep. The family sitting-room or parlor is a matter of course on long evenings, or in that twilight hour before supper, dinner being served at noon.

Or if you chance to be here for health and recreation rather than business, your leisure hour may be spent with Miss Melissa in her sunny sewing-room chatting over local items, or the current literature of the day. Some morning in mid-winter when oranges are ripe and plentiful you may take a basket or suitcase and go with Miss Margaret and her niece down to the packing-house, where luscious "Sunkist" oranges are dispensed five cents the dozen; grape fruit thirty cents.

And oranges! The thirty and forty-five cent varieties at home pale into puny weaklings beside these freshly gathered balls of stored-up sunshine. In a vast distance between the orange on its native heath, as it were, and the same fruit after long weeks of transportation and crowded boxes. Incidentally you learn that by old residents the fruit is considered immature until long after shipping has begun. February and March being regarded as the best months for eating.

In a day or two you go down into the kitchen while the morning's work is in progress, and in a huge sugar kettle in the gas range simmers an orange yellow mixture of unmistakable aroma. Orange marmalade! Its mysteries are no secret and you resolve to try yourself some time next year at home, when oranges are not so expensive. If you have never tasted marmalade made in the home of the orange, then, of a truth, you know not what orange marmalade is. A translucent jelly with slices of fruit and brilliant peeling floating here and there, sweet, but not sickly, so, with very little of that bitter so pronounced in our English and Canadian jars, it is sectar and ambrosia combined.

Then there is fig jam, another sweet, whose mystery is unfolded in the eating, fire being hung by your fireplace. Not unlike the bees' honey—which here is an everyday feature of the table—it is amber-yellow and supremely sweet. Yet even a doubtful liver will not balk at this delicacy, if taken at discreet intervals.

Fruits of all kinds in their season, from grapes and fresh plums to orange, grape fruit and early starberry, are abundant. While dried and canned fruits are beyond number, and a glimpse of the preserve shelves down goes. (For there is a real cellar under the house) reveals stores to tempt the dullest appetite. Vegetables, too, right from the garden, all through the season, with lettuce and tomatoes and other plus glories. From a very limited experience of the larger hotels I should say the quality of fruit and vegetables would average higher in our small boarding-house, where everything is purchased in small quantities from reliable sources, and by the head of the house herself.

Meats are equally good, and bread, cake, pastry and desserts, being of home make, have that inimitable excellence which is lacking in the hotel-made. It is impossible in huge establishments to make a good thing, and a good thing is a consideration in the home life. To dwell among congenial spirits is far more important. The three gentlemen who reside over your household, though from the middle west, have all those ideals and traditions we are accustomed to regard as peculiarly New England. They are the sort you unconsciously associate with old magogany and blue chins and Colonial silver, with big square ancestral mansions and the dignity of generations. Yet they are thoroughly up-to-date in mental attitude, participating in progressive interests.

Of guests the range is illimitable, including Americans from all over the States, with English, French or Russian for variety. This week our guest of honor may be a missionary from China, pausing to recuperate after five strenuous years before the journey east. Next week a teacher or preacher, or some traveler of wide experience.

Always our "Chaperon," as we lovingly designate her, there is the Deaconess, a woman of sweet graciousness with kind words for all. Some day, if you are genuinely interested, she may take you on a round of parish calls, or request your help in packing Christmas baskets for the poor, giving an illuminating insight into the work of that self-sacrificing order, the Deaconesses of the Methodist Episcopal church. The poor and the sick absorb her as a minister, physician and nurse in one; those in trouble turn to her; the wealthy and vigorous and happy are as sincerely her devoted adherents, forever "borrowing" her for a visit; she is the pastor's right hand of dependence, while the pastor's wife and daughter cannot do anything of moment without consulting, "Miss B." She is never too busy to respond.

House lots in the city are somewhat larger than in the East, fifty feet front, I believe on ordinary lots, and they extend back at least twice as far, giving ample lawns and a garden or a chicken "corral" (every second or third family has chickens), while the home without orange, magnolia, palm, or evergreen trees is a rare exception.

As you sit on the south porch upstairs in February or March your outlook comprises a series of back yards, green now like our May, and enlivened by indolent cats, scratching among the trees, lazily and cat-like, and a few enterprising women engaged in amateur agriculture. The fig tree begins to put forth leaves in March, assuring us that summer is nigh, while those old little green warts may be identified as early figs.

The loquats are beginning to ripen; the peach tree is coming out rosy-pink all over; and around the house callas, marguerites, Shasta daisies, and pansies, vary the perpetual greenery and hedges. By the front piazza, those magnificent roses—each trunk as large as your arm, spread themselves more luxuriantly over the roof-trellis, opening wider and wider great buds of crimson or deep pink. Across the street purple and white lilacs form a decorative border to the path and yonder cottage roof is a mass of rose-bloom from the small white variety that delights in roofs and live oak trees. The sturdy oak and the clinging vine is no mere figure of speech in California.

The mocking birds waken you every morning with their jubilant voices, whether sunshine or rain prevails, nothing being too much or too little, but just right to their mind. From personal experience of one winter the writer would say that at least two-thirds of the "rainy season" in Southern California would be called a "drought" in New England. During the other third we had rains, bona fide rains, interspersed with days of glorious sunshine. On rainy afternoons the Public Library is a favorite retreat with its fine library of history, science and fiction, its excellent art collections. Winter residents are now allowed a free card, subject to endorsement by property holders.

You have your church home with its pleasant associations as another link of personal contact; and if you are so fortunate as to find congenial employment, even at sporadic intervals, like an occasional bit of "column" work for local newspapers, you are every day more and more convinced of Pasadena's supreme claim to the title of Home. No longer as a "Millinery City" or a "Land of Roses," do you think of it, first of all. And whether we saunter by multi-millionaire palaces on Grange Grove and Grand avenues, or study the hundreds of less pretentious, but picturesque residences of innumerable artists and aviators eastward, you will agree with the writer that Home is the keynote of it all. For our seven dollars per week in a home, we are, therefore, deriving far more Pasadena life in reality than the tourist whose seven dollars per day purchases the luxuries of a hotel. For hotels may be found in every nook and corner of the continent. But America has produced but one Pasadena.
